Each year, as part of the UA2020 program and the UAAlbany Advanced Data Analytics Network, the University at Albany comes together with the community to explore data as a resource in the development of new knowledge and economic opportunity and as a tool in policy making and problem solving. This year’s Forum is focused on a critical and timely topic: The Future of Health Data Analytics.

The Forum will explore new and emerging frontiers in health data analytics and serve as a platform for launching collaborations with partners across health, academia, industry and government. Lessons learned will help enable the University at Albany, together with our partners, to further innovation, research and discovery efforts, to foster new educational and learning paradigms, and to help address today’s most complex societal challenges.
