A Soc 262
Sociology of Gender (3)
This course examines how gender is socially constructed in contemporary U.S. society. The course examines how gender orders our everyday lives, our sense of self, our friendships, romances, conversations, clothing, body image, entertainment, work, sexuality, and parenthood. Students will learn how conceptions about gender create and enforce a system of gender difference and inequality. This course will examine the lives, experiences, and representations of heterosexual and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgendered and queer (LGBTQ) persons. The course will reveal the “common sense” world of gender that surrounds us by exposing the workings of institutions such as the family, the classroom, the workplace, and the media. Throughout the course we will emphasize the ways in which people experience gender opportunities and constraints differently according to their race, gender, class, and sexuality. Only one version of A SOC 262 may be taken for credit. Prerequisite(s): A Soc 115 or permission of instructor.

A Soc 460Z
Status, Expectations and Behavior (3)
In this course we will investigate several of the basic social processes that occur in interpersonal behavior. Most of our attention will be devoted to issues of power and prestige, status, self-evaluation, justice, deviance, and sentiment. In each case we will review research relevant to the issue, develop theoretical arguments to explain that research, and consider ways of applying those arguments to the analysis and solution of social problems (for example, the problems that arise from gender-based status inequalities).
