The Center for Autism and Related Disabilities at the University Albany is seeking input from parents, school professionals, and community professionals who work with adolescents and young adults with ASD.

Individuals with autism spectrum disorder often experience unique challenges during the transition from high school to adult life. As a first step to addressing these challenges, the Center for Autism and Related Disabilities is hosting a series of focus groups with the goal of better understanding the transition needs and challenges of individuals with ASD. Focus groups will address questions such as:

- What transition services are most needed for students with ASD?
- What challenges do students with ASD face in accessing these services?
- What works well in preparing students with ASD for life after high school?
