Matteo Farinella, a neuroscientist and visual artist who investigates the role of “visual narratives” in science communication, illustrated the neuroscience comic book Neurocomic (2013).

Sponsored by UAlbany’s Department of Biology

“I believe that scientific research should be open and accessible and I think visual narratives can play an important role in bridging the gap between academia and the general public.” — Matteo Farinella