Latinos:
Exploring Diversity and Change

Series Editors:
Edna Acosta-Belén and Christine E. Bose,
University at Albany, SUNY

Only a few decades ago, Latinos in the United States were among the nation’s invisible minorities. Now, however, numbering more than 44 million, they are the largest and fastest-growing minority group, representing nearly 15 percent of the US population. Latinos: Exploring Diversity and Change brings long overdue attention to the social and political conditions and experiences of the diverse groups of Latin American and Caribbean origin that collectively constitute the US Latino population.

We welcome proposals for insightful manuscripts in the social sciences that explore topics ranging from social and political status, to the dynamics of gender, race, and ethnicity, to issues of political economy, to differing immigrant experiences, and beyond.

To discuss a possible project or submit a book proposal, please contact the series editors:

Professor Edna Acosta-Belén
tel: 518-442-4719
e-mail: eab@albany.edu

Professor Christine E. Bose
tel: 518-442-4670
e-mail: c.bose@albany.edu

CELAC, SS-250
University at Albany, SUNY
Albany, NY 12222