The University Counseling Center is committed to the promotion and celebration of diversity in all of its forms. Our multicultural staff seeks to provide a safe, welcoming, and affirming environment for all students seeking our services. We provide individual, group, and couples counseling, outreach programs, and peer programs.

Who provides the services at the University Counseling Center?

The University Counseling Center staff consists of licensed psychologists and a health promotion specialist. Postdoctoral fellows and doctoral interns also provide services under the supervision of licensed psychologists.
I thought I was all alone in feeling depressed, and I was embarrassed to tell my family and friends about what I was feeling. Seeing a counselor helped me to understand that there was help out there and I wasn’t alone.

Did you know?
The opportunity to discuss concerns and challenges as well as share positive experiences can help students feel less alone. Individual counseling can help Latina/o and Hispanic American students:

- Enhance coping skills and develop new strategies to be successful in school
- Improve relationships with fellow students, faculty, friends, and family
- Increase awareness of personal strengths and resources
- Cope with discrimination and other barriers

The University at Albany Counseling Center provides individual counseling and consultation, free of charge (as part of your student health fee) to students within our diverse campus community. Services are confidential; student visits and conversations do not become part of the academic record.

If you are interested or have any questions, please call the University Counseling Center at 518-442-5800, or email us at consultation@albany.edu

Please visit our website at: albany.edu/counseling_center or find us on Facebook

Risk Factors
There are a number of factors that may put students at higher risk for suicide. These include:

- History of self-harm
  Including prior suicide attempts and self-injury (e.g. cutting)

- Depression
  Low mood, sadness, especially if it includes severe self-criticism or a sense of failure

- Hopelessness/helplessness
  Giving up on oneself, on others, on life in general, or the the strong sense that life is pointless

- A recent loss
  Such as the death of a loved one, the ending of a friendship or romantic relationship, or the loss of an important goal

- Reckless or impulsive behaviors
  Including alcohol and other substance abuse, risky sex, or spending money excessively

- Extreme agitation, anxiety, or restlessness

- Mental confusion
  Especially if this includes hearing voices saying you should harm yourself

Although rates of completed suicide are lower for Latina/o youth than other groups, Latina/o youth actually report higher rates of feeling sad/hopeless, thinking about suicide, and attempting suicide than other groups.

Helping a Friend
You can be most helpful by linking the distressed person with professionals who can evaluate and treat suicidal thoughts and behaviors.

Often people may not know the resources available to them, or they may feel uncomfortable reaching out to access services. You can help a friend by suggesting resources (like coming to the University Counseling Center), and you could even offer to go with them to an initial appointment. If your friend does not want to access any services and you are still worried about them, you can seek support and advice by contacting the counseling center yourself.

When to seek immediate assistance
Seek immediate assistance if you or someone else:

- Has caused serious injury to themselves regardless of stated intent (e.g. pill overdose, alcohol poisoning, serious self-harm).

- Threatens or talks about wanting to commit suicide, either verbally or in writing or has somehow made it known that they want or intend to commit suicide (e.g. through email, Facebook, letters, or giving away prized belongings).

- Is making plans or seeking the means to commit suicide (e.g. obtaining weapons, pills, etc.)