The University at Albany’s School of Education is one of the oldest public schools of education in New York State. Founded in 1844, the School’s tradition of excellence ranks it among the very best graduate schools of education in the nation. The School’s four departments—Educational Administration and Policy Studies, Educational and Counseling Psychology, Educational Theory and Practice, and Reading—engage 2,600 graduate and undergraduate students with 160 outstanding full- and part-time faculty. Students pursue doctoral, masters, and graduate certificate programs in areas of study such as educational leadership and policy; educational technology; literacy; elementary, secondary, and special education; curriculum and instruction; and counseling, school, and educational psychology.
