As part of the 12th Annual Educational Psychology & Methodology Poster Session

Dr. Joshua S. Smith

speaks on

Navigating the Transition from Graduate School to your First Faculty Position

Monday, May 6, 2013 at 5:00 p.m.
Standish Room, Science Library

Joshua S. Smith, Ph.D. is the Dean of the School of Education at Loyola University Maryland. He joined the University from the Indiana University School of Education in Indianapolis, where he served as Associate Dean for Research and Academic Affairs, director of the Center for Urban and Multicultural Education, and Associate Professor of Educational Psychology.

Earlier in his career, he served as an academic advisor and later as director of assessment in the office of undergraduate studies at UAlbany. Among his many accomplishments, Dr. Smith has published over 20 articles in the areas of academic transitions and urban education. He has participated in more than 50 grant-funded projects receiving more than $3 million in institutional, foundation, corporation, and government support, most as principal investigator.

Smith earned his B.A. in U.S. History, M.S. in Educational Psychology and Statistics, and Ph.D. in Educational Psychology and Methodology from UAlbany. His awards include the 2006 Indiana University Trustees’ Teaching Award and the National Advising Association’s 2002 Outstanding Advising Award. He is currently the President of NACADA: The Global Community for Academic Advising.

Space is limited. Please RSVP by May 1st to smalison@albany.edu

Student posters for the 12th Annual Poster Session of the Division of Educational Psychology & Methodology will be on display prior to the lecture at 4:00 p.m.

This event is sponsored by:
The School of Education & its Division of Educational Psychology & Methodology
University Auxiliary Services
Graduate Student Organization – Your GSO funds at work!