The Green Workspace Challenge is a self-reporting framework for faculty and staff to make their workplaces more sustainable while gaining recognition for their progress.

The self-assessment tool guides faculty and staff through a wide range of sustainable practices relating to waste, energy, procurement, transportation, meetings, kitchens and campus engagement. A workspace may also pursue innovations points to earn recognition for practices that are not listed in the self-assessment tool. The Challenge is designed to engage the full spectrum of offices on campus. By defining your workspace, the Challenge allows you to account for the spaces and include the people that make sense for your office.

Weaving sustainability into your operations and modeling best practices not only reduces our environmental impact. Together we are building an atmosphere that tells students that sustainability is highly valued at UAlbany.

To learn more or to fill out the self-assessment, please head to www.albany.edu/gogreen and click on the Featured tab.