Claudia Dary performed dissertation field research with the support of a 2005 DeCormier award. She is focusing on community organization and ethnic identity in the context of changing economic factors (such as land ownership) in eastern Guatemala. She performed preliminary interviews of secondary school youth in the town of Los Izotes and their parents about their views on local secular and religious organizations.