Engaging Students in Social Justice Education

A Workshop facilitated by Eric Macias
Education Coordinator
Latin American Youth Center-Maryland

This interactive workshop facilitated by Eric Macias will touch on issues of social justice and diversity in education curriculum, engaging with out of school students, and working to bridge the life of students from the classroom to their community. Eric is a former LACS student with a MA degree in LACS. He has done research on varying educational practices in Latin America and ways to advance ideals of social justice through education. Currently he is education coordinator for the Latin American Youth Center in Montgomery County, Maryland and works with many out of school students on completing their high school diploma. He will bring some of his experience to bear on how we in the university can likewise address major societal issues and be inclusive to students of all types.

Thurs April 7, 2:45PM  HU 123
Hosted by the Latin American, Caribbean, and U.S. Latino Studies RGSO, your GSA funds at work