Tuesday February 7
Science Library - Standish Room
4:00-6:00 PM

On January 20 a possibility that seemed unthinkable came to pass when Donald Trump was inaugurated as the 45th president of the United States. The Department of Latin American, Caribbean, and U.S. Latino Studies invites all members of the UA community, especially those Trump has targeted in his words and actions – Muslims, Mexicans, Latinos, immigrants, African Americans, people of color, workers, women, LGBTQ, people with disabilities, and others – to join us for a series of interactive workshops that will provide tools for people to understand and resist the Trump administration. The first session will look at the following issues, and more:

- White supremacy and threats to racialized communities
- Housing policy and likely impacts on Latino communities
- Trade and globalization
- Trump’s economic agenda
- Resistance strategies
