The Institute for Financial Market Regulation (www.albany.edu/ifmr/) is a partnership of academic institutions, regulatory professionals, and market participants to deliver education and research in financial market regulation. This partnership began in 2006 with the establishment of the Program in Financial Market Regulation.

Two principles drive the Institute:

- Education and research in financial market regulation require an understanding of how finance, information technology, law, and public policy jointly shape the field.
- Connecting academic research skills with professionals' knowledge of operating systems and issues improves research and education in financial market regulation.
