to help federal agencies figure out how to knock down barriers to innovation and best enable the use of new technologies in education, clean energy, and healthcare and medicine.

Finalists will be invited to the Finale in Washington, D.C. to present their proposals to high-profile expert judges from government, industry and academia, as well as meet in person with agency principals to discuss their ideas. Proposals of the winning team(s) will be shared with the Cabinet Secretary from the relevant federal agency.
