To the UAlbany Community:

I am deeply saddened by the news of Thomas Constantine’s passing, and, on behalf of the University at Albany, offer my heartfelt condolences to his family and loved ones.

Tom was a distinguished alumnus and valued member of the University at Albany community. With great distinction and honor, he served our University, our state and our country, as Superintendent of the New York State Police and head of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, and later as Oversight Commissioner for Police Reform in Northern Ireland and Advisor to the U.S. Director of National Intelligence.

As a public service professor at Rockefeller College of Public Affairs and Policy, he served with wisdom and the modesty that marked his humanity.

He was a true friend and inspiration to our University community and was fittingly honored within our “Reaching Higher. Achieving More.” Alumni Campaign. Tom was also the commencement speaker for our 2012 graduate ceremonies and served as a mentor to many in our student body.

We will remember Tom fondly, with pride, and with great admiration.
