Course description and objectives

Welcome to RPOS 386, an advanced undergraduate course on all issues related to international and intrastate conflict! According to military theorist Carl von Clausewitz, “war is the continuation of Politik by other means.” But what explains when politics turn violent? Why can states sometimes resolve disputes peacefully, but not at other times? What are feasible solutions to political violence? What are the most pressing issues in defense policy today?

In this course, we will work together on answering these and more questions. Throughout the semester, we will specifically:

• Identify the meanings and implications of the concepts war and peace
• Develop and compare different frameworks to study why states go to war and why they maintain peace
• Explore the utility of a variety of factors in preventing war
• Study war within countries
• Identify some of the most recent facets of war and political violence
• Debate the implications of social-scientific findings about war and peace for defense policy
• Discuss current challenges in defense policy and civil-military relations, and
• Learn and practice how to use data to examine theories and support arguments.

Prerequisites

The prerequisite for this course is RPOS 102 (Introduction to Comparative & International Politics). I may also provide some background reading on social science concepts and may ask you to study these readings in the first few weeks of class.

Materials

No full books are assigned for this course.

Articles and book chapters

Articles and book chapters/excerpts are posted on Blackboard (https://blackboard.albany.edu) or are available through the UAlbany library (http://library.albany.edu). The library website offers helpful tutorials on how to retrieve scholarly articles here: (http://library.albany.edu/usered/find/index.html).
Requirements and assignments

1. Student Initiative & Reading

Per UAlbany policy, students are expected to attend all classes and all examinations (quizzes) and to complete all course requirements on time. This is a reading-intensive course. The assigned articles and chapters can be quite dense. You must complete all assigned readings prior to the class in which they are scheduled to be discussed. We will go over efficient reading techniques in the first week of class. Also make a habit of checking news sources (see below) on a regular basis. A rule of thumb for upper-level classes like this is that you will need to spend about 3 times the time we meet in class to read and take notes every week. This means that you need to be spending at least about 8 hours per week outside the classroom on this class, plus any extra time you spend working on your class projects.

2. In-class participation (10% of your course grade)

You as a student are an integral part of this course; your active participation in a civil manner is necessary to succeed in this course. Participation will be graded based on your contributions in the classroom: in group exercises and in individual responses to questions. You begin the semester with 100 (out of 100) points for participation. In class, your contributions are evaluated on 4-5 randomly selected days throughout the semester. Students who are present and contribute to civil discussion when called upon or observed will not lose any points. If a student does not contribute when called upon or observed, s/he will lose 10 participation points on that day. Students who are absent when observed will also lose 10 participation points.

3. Clicker points (10% of your course grade)

We will use Clickers in this class for short quizzes and polls. If you haven't yet, please purchase a Clicker at the bookstore and register your device on Blackboard. If you forget to bring your clicker to class, or miss class, or your clicker isn't functioning for the second time in a row, you cannot make up for potential clicker points from that day. Please know that you are responsible for bringing your own clicker, operational and registered to your name, to class. Your clicker points will be calculated as the fraction of \( \frac{\text{Clicker responses that were registered}}{\text{Click-in opportunities}} \).

4. Class blog and online participation (10% of your course grade)

Blog about a news item. At least two or three times during the semester, you will use our class blog at ⟨http://jkrpos386.blogspot.com⟩ to write about a question, current event, or discussion related to international conflict and security. At the beginning of each week (on Sunday nights), I will post a topic for the week on the blog; you will be required to blog about this particular topic. A sign-up list with names, days, and instructions is posted on Blackboard. Your blog post should be at least two paragraphs long, link to at least three news story or blog post on the web, explain why your readers within and outside the class should find the story consequential, and point out how it relates to material we discuss in class. The news item(s) must come from the Economist or any of the sources listed at ⟨http://www.jkarreth.net/rpos386.html⟩, and it must be broadly related to what we discuss in the course.

Online participation. You will also use the class blog to comment on your classmates' posts. For other topics, the discussion board on Blackboard provides a good opportunity to contribute to class discussions. I will check the discussion board daily and take note of posts that are relevant to course content and that promote discussion online or in class. If students blog or tweet about relevant topics on their own, please link to your material on the discussion board to bring it to everyone's attention. Together, posts on the class blog and online comments will account for 10% of your final grade.

Please note: Your blogging grade will be evaluated over the whole semester. This means that you cannot compensate for a lack of online activity by commenting and posting frequently in the last week of the semester. Late blog posts or comments, or blog posts or comments offline or via email, are not accepted.
4. Quizzes (35% of your course grade)

About once a week (dates: see the schedule), you will take a short quiz in class. These quizzes will test your comprehension of the material assigned and discussed in all class meetings since the end of the last quiz. They will not cover the content of the day on which they are administered. They will be administered at the beginning of the class period and take about 5-10 minutes. There will be 12 quizzes total. Your lowest 2 quiz scores are dropped and your quiz grade will be the average of your 10 best quizzes.

Missing quizzes. If you miss a quiz for any reason, it will be scored as a 0. Your two lowest quizzes are dropped automatically, so missing two quizzes will still allow you to earn a perfect score on the quiz portion of your grade.

5. Analysis and arguments (35% of your course grade)

GROUP PROJECT

Throughout the semester, I scheduled opportunities for you to investigate in more depth some issues that arise from the topics we are discussing in this course. You will sign up for a topic and date together with two other students in the second week of the semester. Your group of three will then meet on its own to do research about the topic and prepare a presentation. On the day of your topic, you will present some results and discuss them with another group of two who has also researched a related topic. The instructor and the class will evaluate the quality of your arguments and your discussion skills. More information about the format of this assignment can be found at the end of this syllabus.

Note: These presentations and discussions are an integral part of this course. You will find and use new sources (scholarly articles, possibly also opinion pieces) to make your point, based on your research. You must meet with me two weeks before your assigned date.

Dates and topics will be announced on Day 2, August 28.

TERM PAPER

You will write a short term paper in this class, 1500-2000 words long and single-spaced. See the end of this syllabus for more detailed instructions. This paper will build on the work you do for your group project (see above). The term paper is due on Tuesday, December 16, by 5pm. You must come to my office hour at least once before November 6 to discuss your paper topic with me. Among other things, your paper will need to:

- begin with a question about an issue related to international conflict and security, building on your group project topic
- offer an answer to and insight into this question
- use evidence to support this position
- incorporate and address questions and critiques you encountered during your presentation.

In your papers, be sure to:

- to correctly summarize alternate arguments
- to clearly state how you address these alternate arguments
- to provide empirical evidence (such as an example you discuss in some depth) to support your argument and debunk alternate arguments
- use at least 5 scholarly sources that contribute (or contradict!) the points you are making.

More information on the term paper can be found at the end of this syllabus.

Grade Appeals. If you believe your assignment has been graded wrongly, you may appeal your grade in writing only on the day after the assignment was returned. Comparisons to other students’ graded assignments will not be accepted as evidence for the complaint. The original copy of the graded assignment must be submitted with the petition. Note that the new grade may be the same, higher, or lower than the original grade and will be final. This course does not offer extra credit opportunities.

Please note: If you aim to achieve a good grade in this course, and if this seminar is essential to your academic success (e.g., avoiding academic probation), your best shot at success is to put a lot of effort into this seminar early into the semester. You will not be able to affect your grade substantially in the last week of class when 80 or more percent of your grade are already determined. If you cannot commit to putting in effort throughout the whole semester, do not take this course.

Class policies

Disability accommodations. Reasonable accommodations will be provided for students with documented physical, sensory, systemic, cognitive, learning and psychiatric disabilities. If you believe you have a disability requiring accommodation in this class, please notify the Director of the Disability Resource Center (Campus Center 137, 442-5490). That office will provide the course instructor with verification of your disability, and will recommend appropriate accommodations. If you wish to discuss academic accommodations for this course, please also inform me as soon as possible. While I will make every effort to accommodate valid requests, students should not expect that, if they do poorly on an exam or other assignment, to claim, at that time, the need of an accommodation. This statement is to preclude that problem, and allow people with a need for accommodations to be treated fairly and appropriately.

Religious observance. I will also make every effort to accommodate religious observances and obligations. You are asked to bring any possible conflicts to my attention as soon as possible. Students should not expect that, if they do poorly on an exam or other assignment, to claim, at that time, the need of an accommodation. This statement is to preclude that problem, and allow people with a need for accommodations to be treated fairly and appropriately.

Classroom behavior. Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. Those who fail to adhere to such behavioral standards may be subject to disciplinary procedures. Professional courtesy and sensitivity are especially important with respect to individuals and topics dealing with differences of race, color, culture, religion, creed, politics, veteran's status, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity, and gender expression, age, disability, and nationalities. Class rosters are provided to the instructor with the student's legal name. I will gladly honor your request to address you by an alternate name or gender pronoun. Please advise me of this preference early in the semester so that I may make appropriate changes to my records.
Academic honesty. All students of the University at Albany are responsible for knowing and adhering to the academic integrity policy of our institution. Please familiarize yourself with this policy at ⟨http://www.albany.edu/undergraduate_bulletin/regulations.html⟩. Violations of this policy may include: cheating, plagiarism, aid of academic dishonesty, fabrication, lying, bribery, and threatening behavior. The policy also precludes submitting material that was previously submitted in another course. If you are involved in plagiarism, the penalty will be failure in the course and you will be reported to judicial affairs. In this one regard there are no second chances. If you are not sure if something violates standards—ask. If you are not sure whether to cite or not to cite—cite. Every student must complete the following tutorial: ⟨http://library.albany.edu/usered/plagiarism/index.html⟩.

Emergencies and absences. If you miss a quiz or deadline, there are no opportunities to make up for late work regardless of the reason for absence. However,

- your two lowest quizzes are dropped automatically, so missing two quizzes will still allow you to earn a perfect score on the quiz portion of your grade.
- you can write your blog posts before your assigned date to avoid missing the deadline
- your paper is eligible for 80% of the paper grade if submitted by 5pm on December 17, and eligible for 60% of the paper grade if submitted by 5pm on December 18.

Laptops in the Classroom. Studies have shown that “laptop use is negatively associated with student learning and it poses a distraction to fellow students.” Despite negative effects, taking digital notes, if done right, may allow for more efficient studying. For this reason, laptops are allowed in the classroom only for the purpose of taking notes. If you wish to use your laptop to take notes, please come see me immediately after our first course meeting. Cellphones and all other electronic devices cannot be used during class time.

Writing. Although this is not a writing/composition class, you will have the opportunity to spend a substantial amount of time on perfecting your writing skills. Good and concise writing is one of the key skills you can develop during a curriculum in political science/international affairs, and it will be an essential skill in your professional portfolio. You will earn unsatisfactory grades for assignments that suffer from bad writing, fail to make coherent arguments, and do not cite sources properly. You may consult Henry Farrell’s guide on essay writing in Political Science ⟨http://www.henryfarrell.net/pol_sci_essay.html⟩, or Strunk and White’s The Elements of Style.

Schedule

This schedule is subject to change throughout the semester. The latest version of the syllabus is always posted at http://www.jkarreth.net/rpos386.html.

1. Introduction

Day 1 (Tuesday, August 26)

Introduction to the course, instructor, and course requirements. Reading techniques.

- Required: read the syllabus before our first meeting.

Day 2 (Thursday, August 28)

Basic concepts in social science. Why and how can social science help us explain war and peace? What tools do social scientists use to analyze in order to investigate important questions?

  -  Read pp. 121-123 and 127-135. Be sure to have a working understanding of the following terms:
    * Falsification
    * Case study
    * Large-N study
    * Logical consistency
    * Variable (dependent and independent)
    * Hypothesis
    * Internal validity
    * External validity

- Recommended—particularly if any of the above terms are unclear: Chapters 1, 2, and 4 in Hoover, K. R. and Donovan, T. (2011). The Elements of Social Scientific Thinking. Cengage Learning, Independence, KY. (Blackboard)

Day 3 (Tuesday, September 2)

IR theory pre-fresher. What do the major theories of IR have to say about relations between countries and about war and peace?

  -  Although this short summary’s primary audience are students of international law, it is useful for our questions: what explains the occurrence of war or the persistence of peace?

Day 4 (Thursday, September 4) | Quiz 1

What is a war? How do we make sense of wars and political science in the news and in history? Why is it important to define the concept of war, and what is difficult about it? Does big data help address some of these difficulties?

  - Recommended: “What can we learn from the last 200 million things that happened in the world?” Foreign Policy—War of Ideas blog (http://ideas.foreignpolicy.com/posts/2013/04/10/what_can_we_learn_from_the_last_200_million_things_that_happened_in_the_world)

2. Causes of conflict
Day 5 (Tuesday, September 9)
The Prisoner’s Dilemma and Cooperation. Why do we see war instead of peaceful bargains? Why can cooperation be so difficult?

  - Read chapter 1. Be sure to have a working understanding of the following terms:
    * Cooperation
    * Prisoner’s Dilemma
    * Defection
    * Commitment
    * Discount

- Recommended: watch this episode of Golden Balls: ⟨http://youtu.be/p3Uos2fzIJ0⟩.

Day 6 (Thursday, September 11) | Quiz 2
War as an extension of political bargaining. Schelling’s work has been highly influential for U.S. defense policy since the 1960s.

Day 7 (Tuesday, September 16)
The modern bargaining model: We revisit the basics of a systematic bargaining explanation for war and peace. Private information and commitment problems. Under what conditions are states unable to make a peaceful bargain?

- No required reading.

Day 8 (Thursday, September 18) | Quiz 3
Systemic causes of war: (Changes in) the distribution of power and war.

Day 9 (Tuesday, September 23)
Diversionary war. Do politicians choose to go to war to divert attention from domestic problems?

  - Read pp. 7–12. Be sure to have a working understanding of the following terms:
    * Winning coalition
    * Selectorate
    * Democracy
    * Autocracy

- Movie recommendation: Wag the Dog (directed by Barry Levinson, USA, 1997).
No class on Thursday, September 25 (Rosh Hashanah)

Day 10 (Tuesday, September 30)

Psychological explanations. Are simple expected-utility models missing important aspects of decision-making?

Day 11 (Thursday, October 2) | Quiz 4

The democratic peace. What explains the regularity that there are no wars between democracies (if there aren’t)? What is democratic peace “theory” (if there is one)?

- No required reading.

Day 12 (Tuesday, October 7)

Alliances. Are military alliance commitments insulated from domestic politics?

---

Day 13 (Thursday, October 9) | Quiz 5

Trade. How do economic ties affect interstate relations?

  - Read “Interdependence and Conflict: An Introduction”. Be sure to have a working understanding of the broader concept of interdependence and the challenges connected to it.

Day 14 (Tuesday, October 14)

Economic integration, capitalism, and war. Is the democratic peace masking a capitalist peace?

Day 15 (Thursday, October 16) | Quiz 6

International institutions. When and why do international organizations influence war and peace between states?

Day 16 (Tuesday, October 21)

Peace agreements and their effect on post-conflict relations.

International law and conduct of war. When do states comply with the laws of war?

---

4. Conflict within states

Day 17 (Thursday, October 23) | Quiz 7

Why are civil wars relevant for war, peace, and strategic defense?

  - If you choose to skim this article, focus on pp. 3–9 and 37-45.

When and where do civil wars occur?

Day 18 (Tuesday, October 28)

Microfoundations. Who fights in civil wars?

Day 19 (Thursday, October 30) | Quiz 8

Why do some civil wars last longer than others?

5. Conflict without direct violence

Day 20 (Tuesday, November 4)

Economic statecraft: sanctions. Which type(s) of sanctions work best? What are selection effects and why do they complicate our ability to learn about the effectiveness of sanctions?

Day 21 (Thursday, November 6) | Quiz 9

Deterrence theory.

  - Read pp. 150-153. Be sure to have a working understanding of the following terms:
    * Rational actor assumption
    * Fundamental deterrence problem
    * Type I and II deterrence
  - Be sure to have a working understanding of the following terms:
Day 22 (Tuesday, November 11)

Nuclear weapons & bargaining. Is it an advantage for states in bargaining games to have nuclear weapons?

When do states (not) use nuclear weapons?

Day 23 (Thursday, November 13) | Quiz 10

Civil-military relations. How do civilians control the military (“who will guard the guardians”)? What are challenges in the relationship between civilian governments and the military?

  - Skim this article so that you have a working understanding of the following terms:
    * Principal-agent relationship
    * Coups
    * Civil-military friction
    * Military compliance
    * Professionalism
    * Institutionalization
  - Skim chapter 1 by Richard Betts.
- Movie recommendations:
  - The Manchurian Candidate
Day 24 (Tuesday, November 18)

How does terrorism affect the politics of international conflict and security?

- For a detailed reading list on terrorism, see Erica Chenoweth’s syllabus for her seminar on The Politics of Terrorism at ⟨http://www.ericachenoweth.com⟩.

Day 25 (Thursday, November 20) | Quiz 11

Counterinsurgency operations. When is counterinsurgency successful?

Day 26 (Tuesday, November 25)

Environmental stress and conflict. Do environmental trends have implications for war, peace, and strategic defense?

No class on Thursday, November 27 (Thanksgiving)

7. Current security challenges

Day 27 (Tuesday, December 2)

Current security challenges case study: Implications of the 2014 Ukraine crisis

- Reading: TBA
Day 28 (Thursday, December 4)
Current security challenges case study: Modern-day Piracy
  · Reading: TBA

Day 29 (Tuesday, December 9) | Quiz 12
Final quiz, wrap-up and conclusions.

Tuesday, December 16, by 5pm || Term papers due
Term papers are due by 5pm. (Your paper is eligible for 80% of the paper grade if submitted by 5pm on December 17, and eligible for 60% of the paper grade if submitted by 5pm on December 18.)

Disclaimer
Last updated: September 3, 2014. This syllabus is a general outline for the class and may be modified as the course progresses. Students are responsible for closely reading the class rules and procedures in this syllabus.

The latest version of the syllabus is always posted at http://www.jkarreth.net/rpos386.html.
Guidelines: Group projects

By September 4, sign up in class for a project topic. You will form a team with 2 other students and will have to face 3 other students in the class presentation on the topic of your choice. Each team is expected to research the assigned topic thoroughly and beyond the materials in the syllabus. Contact me if you have any questions about materials that you can use in your debate.

Format. The presentations and discussions of your group work will be organized according to the following format (covering about 25-30 minutes):

- 3-5 “summary of findings” by each team
- 3 minute questions by each team
- 10-15 minutes of discussion
- 3 minute conclusions by each team

Summary and bibliography. In addition to the in-class presentation, teams will put together a one-page summary of their findings (a bullet-point list is enough) and a brief annotated bibliography on a second page. Your annotated bibliography should have a sentence or two summarizing the significance of the source for your work (in your own words) after each bibliography entry. Email this document to me no later than 9pm on the day before your presentation.

Teamwork. Each individual student will be responsible for participating in discussion and planning sessions, contributing to research and preparation for this assignment, completing an evaluation of their team members, and participating in the in-class presentation and debate. If you have trouble reaching your group partners and have tried to contact them twice without any response, send me a note and prepare the assignment on your own.

Evaluation. Evaluation will be based on the following elements:

- Your team's complete annotated bibliography (10%)
- The overall quality of your team's in-class performance, rated by the instructor (40%)
- The quality of your personal debate performance, rated by the instructor (40%)
- The quality of your presentation, rated by the class (10%)

Guidelines: Term papers

Write a 2-page single-spaced position paper, expanding on the topic of your in-class presentation.

1. Begin with describing the question you explored in your in-class presentation in one paragraph.
2. Then offer your answer to and insight into this question in about one page. You may take a different position than you took in your in-class presentation. I am not that interested in the position you are taking as such, but I want you to build a coherent, theoretically informed argument that provides relevant and fitting empirical support. You should use the required and recommended references for your topic/issue area given in the syllabus as the core of your sources, but go beyond them and find additional material to build your argument.
3. Next, make sure you address questions and issues that came up during your in-class presentation in your paper—if they are pertinent to your argument. Spend about two thirds of a page on this.
4. Finish the paper with a one-paragraph conclusion, summarizing your answer to your paper’s question and the implications of your answer for any current applications of this question.

Important: This paper is an opportunity and obligation to tie together many of the ideas and topics you have encountered in this class, from “big” IR theories to bargaining and causes of war and peace. I expect that you reference at least three of these topics and ideas in your papers. Papers based simply based on opinion without referencing the ideas discussed in class throughout the semester will not receive a passing grade.
Sources. All sources must be properly cited in this paper, using the Chicago Manual of Style author-date guidelines. Your writings should be analytic, insightful, creative, and integrate previous readings and your knowledge of the field. Do not regurgitate any of the readings or well-known arguments. Instead, use your theoretical and empirical knowledge creatively to argue for the position you have taken. Excellent papers will make clear points and tell the reader something new and enlightening.

Purpose. Think of this assignment as a practice for writing concise briefs later in your professional career. Writing this position paper will ideally deepen your understanding of a controversial issue and improve your analytical and persuasive writing skills. You should write to inform and to persuade.

Structure. The position papers must have the following elements:

1. Formulation of the position the paper is taking, or the issue the paper is addressing.
2. A clear definition of the major technical terms used in the paper (e.g. “justice”, “democratic”, “war”, “intervention”, etc.)
3. Clearly structured arguments. I strongly suggest that your paper identifies at some point what theoretical approach your argument is following (e.g., realist, institutionalist, etc.).
4. At least 5 references to scholarly work backing up your arguments. These works can be articles or book (sections) we have read in the class, additional readings from the syllabus, or additional work you have found. You are free to use other citable material as well, but you need to provide at least 5 references to journal articles or books.
5. A conclusion, summing up your arguments and pointing to the implications of your statements.

Submission. The position paper is due [submission mode] at 5pm on December 17. It must be 2 single-spaced pages long and submitted as an electronic copy.

Evaluation. The position paper will be evaluated along the following six criteria:

- Consistency and coherence
- Quality of evidence
- Style
- Relevance (or your ability to clarify why readers should care about your argument)
- Smart use of source material
- Creativity
