RESEARCH INTERESTS

- STRATIFICATION PROCESSES, particularly as they apply to gender inequalities
- DISTRIBUTIVE JUSTICE, particularly the processes by which expectations for reward emerge in status situations, the role that referential comparisons play in these processes, and the effects of such expectations on task performance and assessments of justice and injustice in organizations.
- THEORETICAL GROWTH IN SOCIOLOGY, particularly the identification of different patterns of theoretical growth and of different criteria of assessment associated with each pattern.
- SOCIAL CONTROL OF DEVIANCE IN SMALL GROUPS, particularly with respect to violations of the status-based expectations of others.

TEACHING INTERESTS

- SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY AND THEORY CONSTRUCTION
- SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY
- SEX AND GENDER STRATIFICATION
- SOCIOLOGY OF SCIENCE AND KNOWLEDGE
- QUANTITATIVE METHODOLOGY AND STATISTICS
- ORGANIZATIONAL PROCESSES
- DEVIANCE

WORK UNDER REVIEW

---

WAGNER, D.G. "Gender, Status, and Reward Preference: An Expectation States Account." (Revise and resubmit)

WAGNER, D.G., AND R.O. HARRIS. "Instrumental Objects and Task Behavior." (Revise and resubmit)

WORK IN PROGRESS

PROPOSALS

WAGNER, D.G. "Group Reactions to Status Violations." Proposal for experimental test of empirical implications of status violations theory, to be submitted to NSF.

BOOKS

WAGNER, D.G. Daring Modesty: The Generation, Analysis and Development of Sociological Ideas. A comprehensive consideration of four basic questions regarding the construction of sociological theories:

1. What is the purpose of theorizing?
2. From what sources do sociological theories come?
3. How can we tell whether our theories are "good" or "bad"?
4. How do we go about making our good theories better?

ARTICLES

WAGNER, D.G., AND R.O. HARRIS. "Instrumental Information and Task Behavior." Research report on experiments concerned with the effects of differential information about task properties on performance in group task situations.

WAGNER, D.G., AND M. HAMIT FISEK. "Reward Expectations and Allocative Behavior: A Revised Function." Development and empirical testing of a revised mathematical function to be applied to predictions about expectations for reward in distributive justice studies. Based on our earlier theoretical work on expectations for reward and on a function for predicting their behavioral effects.

WAGNER, D.G. "Characteristics, Objects, and Information: An Integrated View of Instrumental Task Behavior." Theoretical discussion and report of experiments concerned with the implications of differential possession of task-relevant objects, abilities or information in task performance.

WAGNER, D.G. "The Interdependence of Status and Reward Expectancies." Report of an experiment testing an assumption of reward expectation theory that claims interdependence between expectations for reward allocation and expectations for task performance.

WAGNER, D.G., J. LARSHUS, AND OTHERS. "The Attribution of Instrumental and Expressive Task Roles." Research report on a series of experiments testing whether patterns of behavioral interaction predict the attribution of instrumental and expressive roles in task groups.
