Distinguished Alumni Speaker Series

At a United Nations Summit in 2000, heads of state from throughout the world adopted the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), setting the year of 2015 for achieving eight MDGs. Only five years remain. Will the world achieve these MDG targets? This talk will examine progress to date, the opportunities and challenges, as well as offer practical solutions on the way forward with emphasis on population growth and public health implications.

Thursday, December 9, 2010
3:30 - 5:00 p.m. Lecture
5:00 p.m. Reception

University at Albany
School of Public Health Auditorium

RSVP by December 2 to SPH05@uamail.albany.edu or 486-1936

Jotham Musinguzi, MD, MPH
Regional Director,
Partners in Population & Development,
Africa Regional Office Statistics House
UAlbany School of Public Health’s 1st MPH Graduate