Isolation and the Search for Connection:
Borderline Personality Disorder

Presented by: Elisa B. Meredith, LCSW-R, MBA

Tuesday, July 7th
1pm – 4pm

Many social workers find working with people with Borderline Personality Disorder particularly challenging. Transference and countertransference come to the fore very quickly as we explore the isolation, search for connection, and perceived danger in the everyday life of a person with BPD. In this workshop, experienced social workers are invited to be part of a conversation where we examine clinical and behavioral definitions, consider possible causes, examine new research, and share approaches to treating persons with Borderline Personality Disorder.

Learning objectives:
• To be able to frame/conceptualize Borderline Personality Disorder across a spectrum.
• Introduction to new research findings.
• Broaden understandings of treatment planning and intervention when working with persons with Borderline Personality Disorder.
• Explore, with other experienced social workers, professional experience as it relates to working with persons with Borderline Personality Disorder.

This program is free of charge. However if you would like to receive Social Work Continuing Education hours, there is a cost of $60/ $30 for SSW field instructors. This event is approved for 3 CE hours.
