These classes are designed specifically for new transfer students to get to know each other and a member of our faculty in a small class setting. They are great opportunities to learn about a cutting edge topic from our best faculty while developing the skills needed to be a successful UAlbany student. Classes meet once a week for 55 minutes and provide students with an intimate learning experience designed to help them acclimate to the academic challenges at the University at Albany.

Personal Financial Planning for Transfers

#7712 | M 1:40 – 2:35

Now that you have transferred to UAlbany, how will you pay for it? How much debt is ok? How much might you earn in your intended major? This course will help students figure out how to conduct financial planning related to events such as 1.) student loan payments, 2.) credit card debt, 3.) housing costs, 4.) automobile payments. Basic accounting principles will be reviewed in class to enable the students to understand personal finance issues. Students will be able to construct a real or hypothetical personal financial plan.

Professor John Schwaller

Conquest! Examination of the European Conquest of the Americas

#10304 | T 1:10 – 2:15

This course will invite new transfer students to look at comparing the conquests of native peoples in the New World. Cortes in Mexico, Pizarro in Peru, the Dutch in Nieuw Amsterdam, the British in Jamestown, all provide insights both into the nature of European History at the time, but also how European saw native peoples. Until recently, this was the only perspective we had to study. Increasingly native accounts of the conquest period are becoming available and opening new doors in understanding the process of European conquest. Students from all majors are encouraged to join us and look at conquests from both sides and seek to find some common features.
