Contents

Forward ................................................................. vii

Part 1. Introduction, Process, and Problem ....................... 1
  1. Introduction ......................................................... 3
  2. Problem Solving as a Generic Instructional Design Process ............ 11
  3. Defining the Problem ............................................. 23

Part 2. Multimedia as a Set of Solutions ......................... 37
  4. Generating Solutions: Multimedia Hardware ........................ 39
  5. Generating Solutions: Methods and Models for Using Multimedia .......... 55
  6. Generating Solutions: Purchasing or Obtaining Existing Applications .......... 65
  7. Generating Solutions: Developing Your Own Multimedia Applications ........... 77
  8. Generating Solutions: Repurposing Multimedia Applications .............. 89

  10. Implementing Your Solution: Using Multimedia as a Teaching and Learning Tool .... 115
  11. Evaluating the Use of Multimedia .................................. 123
Part 4. The Future and Conclusion ........................................ 133
12. The Future of Multimedia ........................................ 135
13. Summary and Conclusion ........................................ 147

Part 5. Resources ....................................................... 153
Appendix: Resources for Multimedia in Higher Education .......... 155
Glossary ................................................................ 159
References ................................................................ 165
Index ...................................................................... 173

This book was developed to provide unlimited potential for technologies are little used in high- opment, and many faculty required to use its resources.

The authors have engaged in higher education: they have itself developed many classes. They have system, which use the use of large group styles to instruction offered education, and practical applications would like to share with other.

The book is designed to related to multimedia, and to the literature, lists of pertinent suggestions. While items in theoretical issues, the author's guide to professors in higher about using multimedia as well classrooms and learning laboratories, media hardware and software, a starting point for further study.

The authors wish to acknowledge was developed in their interactive Group at the University of Keener, Iver Bogen, Eugenia Ollender, and Vern Simon. K. Bright, who is now Dean. They also wish to thank the student design who contributed to multimedia. Finally, they also wish to thank the use of multimedia.