

The authors and Stylus Publishing, LLC acknowledge Inside Higher Ed and a number of doctoral seminars for providing forums in which to present a number of these hints. The authors thank Ms. Teresa Wilborn for her help in preparing the manuscript.

CONTENTS

Foreword 1 by Laurie Richlin	xvii
Foreword 2 by Steadman Upham	xxi
Introduction	1
CHAPTER ONE: BASIC CONCEPTS
1 Gray's Theorem of $N + 2$	7
2 100 powerful people	7
3 What you can do to become known	7
4 Drew's Law on Publishing Papers	8
5 Mentors	8
6 Get known for something	8
CHAPTER TWO: THE PhD
7 Finish the PhD as early as possible	11
8 Be humble about your PhD	11
9 A PhD indicates survivorship	11
10 Research sample of 1	12
11 License to reproduce	12
12 A PhD in hand	12
13 Key danger point	13
14 PhD and part-time study	13

15	Avoid Watson's syndrome	14
16	Celebrate your PhD!	15

CHAPTER THREE: JOB HUNTING

17	Job hunting is a research project	19
18	Go where you and your family want to live	19
19	Build a reference pool	19
20	Résumés are important	20
21	Interview your potential boss	20
22	Deal with interviewers who published less than you already have	20
23	Find the best possible school	20
24	Get the PhD before you start the tenure track	21
25	Consider nonuniversity research organizations	21
26	Don't take the first job at the school where you received your PhD	21
27	The assistant dean strategy	22
28	Law of supply and demand	22
29	Determine the culture	23
30	Need for salary and tenure information	24
31	Getting tenure data	24
32	The postdoc option	24
33	Change your career every seven years	25
34	Ask about the retirement system	26
35	Coping with parking	26
36	Real pay	27
37	Get offer in writing	27
38	Potential of other employment	28

CHAPTER FOUR: TEACHING AND SERVICE

39	Publication is the only portable wealth	33
40	Teaching is becoming more valuable for tenure	33

41	Teaching is a learned art	33
42	Obtain public speaking help if you need it	34
43	Meeting classes	34
44	Distance learning	34
45	Student excuses	35
46	Student cheating	35
47	Teaching can be dangerous	35
48	Don't serve on committees where you are the expert	36
49	The "mode" of the number of publications	36

CHAPTER FIVE: RESEARCH

50	Make sure you have time for research	39
51	Trade-off between teaching and research	39
52	Quantitative and qualitative methods	40
53	Learn grantsmanship	40
54	Writing the grant proposal	41
55	If your grant proposal is declined	41
56	Advisory panel in the proposal	42
57	Advisory panel after the proposal is accepted	42
58	Get the grant approval in writing	42

CHAPTER SIX: TENURE

59	Tenure is the prize	45
60	Why tenure is a hurdle	45
61	The tenure clock is really 4.5 years	46
62	Tenure committees count refereed publications	46
63	If you are tenured, keep it when you change jobs	46
64	Tenure can be negotiated on the way in	46
65	Tenure is tougher in cross-disciplinary fields	47
66	Tenure may not be here forever	47
67	Rolling reviews	47
68	Tenured slots may decrease with time	48

CHAPTER SEVEN: ACADEMIC RANK

69	Tenured full professor is freedom	51
70	As a full professor you must be known for something	51
71	Don't become a "Permanent Associate Professor"	52
72	Pay raises for promotion	52

CHAPTER EIGHT: ACADEMIC SALARY

73	Academics are risk averse	55
74	Nine-month contracts	55
75	Salary variation by field	55
76	Administrators make more	56
77	Summer pay	56

CHAPTER NINE: LIFE AS AN ACADEMIC

78	Bad deans	59
79	Don't choose sides in department politics	59
80	Don't take a joint appointment	59
81	Secretaries are a scarce resource	59
82	Value your TAs and graders	60
83	Grading	60
84	Research assistants	60
85	Physical plant	61
86	Join the faculty club	61
87	Office hours	62
88	Sabbaticals	62
89	Collegiality	63
90	Professors are public persons	63
91	Freedom of speech	63
92	Attend campus lectures	64
93	Letters of reference for students	65
94	Writing external letters of evaluation	66

Your Digital Life

		67
95	The computer center	68
96	E-mail	68
97	The down side of e-mail	68
98	Don't get on too many e-mail lists	69
99	E-mail from your students	69
100	Keep up with computer developments	70
101	Meetings and digital publication	71
102	Interlibrary loan	72
103	Digital libraries	72

Institutional Citizen

		72
104	Development	72
105	Alumni office	73
106	Public relations	73
107	Faculty Senate	74

Department Chair

		74
108	A job for full professors	74
109	The limited powers of department chairs	75
110	The role conflict in the job	75
111	Leadership	76
112	Dealing with student problems	76
113	The redeeming social values of the job	76
114	Don't stay in the job too long	77

Grievances

		77
115	Student grievances	77
116	Sexual harassment	77
117	Serving on the grievance committee	78
118	Being a grievant	78

Dealing with Myths

		79
119	Free time	79
120	Political leanings	79

CHAPTER TEN: DIVERSITY

121	The continuing goal	83
122	Variation among institutions	84
123	Assessing colleagues and deans	85
124	Indicators of true diverse hiring	85
125	Climate for women	85
126	The literature	86

CHAPTER ELEVEN: ON WRITING

127	Learn how to write clearly	91
128	Learn the fine points of English	91
129	Spell-check and grammar-check	92
130	Plagiarism is a no-no	92
131	Limits on self-plagiarism	92
132	Drew's Rule of Conference Redundancy	93
133	Pool of research references	93
134	Reuse of dissertation references	94

CHAPTER TWELVE: ON PUBLISHING

135	Submit your papers to the best journals in the field	97
136	Write for refereed journals	97
137	Avoid writing elementary textbooks	97
138	Difference between first and n th paper	98
139	Writing the n th paper	98
140	Make contribution clear	98
141	Revise papers quickly	99
142	Turn your reviews of others around quickly	99
143	Publish early and often	99
144	Your dissertation is a publishing asset	99
145	Your literature search is a treasure trove	100
146	Include single-author papers in your portfolio	100

147	Coauthoring with superstars	100
148	The delays in publication	100

Journals

149	Don't become editor too early	104
150	Advantages of being a reviewer	104

Book Publishers

151	Usefulness of publisher reps	105
152	Selecting a publisher	105
153	Meet the publisher's editors	106

CHAPTER THIRTEEN: PERSONAL CONSIDERATIONS

154	Learn new things over time	109
155	Being an expert witness	109
156	Don't be a penny-ante thief	111
157	Learn time management	111
158	Time to completion	112

CHAPTER FOURTEEN: FINAL THOUGHTS

159	Your reputation	115
160	Treating students as guests	115

CHAPTER FIFTEEN:
CONCLUSION AND ENVOI

Envoi	119
-------	-----

APPENDIXESAPPENDIX A: THE DISSERTATION

161	Finding a dissertation topic	123
162	Problem-solving model	123
163	The dissertation proposal	124

164	The range of your literature review	124
165	Selecting the dissertation advisory committee	124
166	The chain of references	125
167	Coupling discussion of results with the literature review	125
168	The risk of "not significant" results	125

APPENDIX B: OUTSIDE INCOME

169	Consulting as a hired hand	127
170	Don't live on your consulting income	128
171	Paying taxes on consulting income	128
172	Grants and contracts	128
173	The summer teaching option	129
174	Regular income versus Schedule C income	129
175	Pro bono work	129
176	Consulting pay rate	129
177	Teaching in two schools	131

APPENDIX C: WRITING TIPS

178	Explain only what reader needs to know	132
179	Avoid passive voice	132
180	Avoid "should" and "must"	133
181	Avoid using too much boldface and italics	133
182	"Effective and efficient"	133
183	Avoid generalizing from a single case	133
184	Use of lists	133
185	Figures and tables	134
186	Styles in word processing programs	134
187	Spell-checker	134
188	Pay special attention to references	135
189	Eliminate poor writing habits	136
190	"Bad words"	137

APPENDIX D: YOUR HEALTH

191	Minimize stress	139
192	Start a health and fitness program	141
193	Exercise	141
194	Addictions	141
195	Weight control	142
196	Diet	142
197	Meditation	143
198	Physical appearance	143
199	Insurance	144
	About the Authors	147