Course Description:

Women’s bodies are at once everywhere and out of sight: fueling global economies through labor and consumerism and shaping ideologies of dominance as displayed on billboards, in magazine ads, on movie screens, in music videos, in the art gallery, or on the Internet. Moreover, their bodies signify diverse meanings when race is taken into context. This course will subsequently explore how intersections of race, gender, class, nationality, sexuality, age, and (dis)ability shape representations in mass media and popular culture. We will also develop a transnational feminist media analysis, leading us to consider possible means of creative resistance against sexual objectification and societal domination.

Required Texts:

Course Packet – available at Shipmates (hereafter abbreviated as CP).

These books are available for purchase at Mary Jane Books or the Book House in Stuyvesant Plaza.

Course Requirements:

Class Participation (20 points)

Your regular attendance and participation are required for the success of this class. Participation includes your weekly contributions of discussion questions and commentaries on reading/film assignments on our webct discussion board, in addition to your regular contributions to classroom discussions. You are allowed 3 unexcused absences; however, if you go over this number, you stand to lose 1 point for each additional absence from your final grade. If you cannot avoid an absence due to illness or emergencies, please notify me in advance so that you may be excused. A bonus of 2 points will be added to your final grade for perfect attendance.

Film Screenings (15 points)

Three screenings are scheduled this semester on Monday evenings at 7:30 p.m. in Physics 123. You can earn up to 15 points for attending these (5 points/screening). You will also need to read 2-3 reviews and criticisms of the film, prior to attending the screening, and to prepare an annotated bibliography of these secondary sources, to be submitted at the end of each screening. On the Mondays when we have an evening screening, regular class sessions will be canceled (with two exceptions: special workshops on web design for the Class website group only [see below]). If you will be unable to attend these events, you will need to drop this class or stand to lose 15 points from your final grade!

Media Review (20 points)

You will be expected to submit a review (4-5 pages, typed and double-spaced) of a current movie, TV show, music CD, zine/website, video game/software, or print journal/magazine, using feminist media analysis. The assignment is due Wed., Feb. 25.

Media Watch (20 points)

We have an opportunity, as a class, to create a tool for public education and human rights advocacy: the collection of various media materials depicting women in either problematic or subversive ways, to be prepared for the activist work of Breakthrough, a human rights organization. This organization would especially like us to collect media images of women of color/"Third World" women, so you will be encouraged to collect materials featuring African/American, Arab/American, Asian/American, Latina, and Native American women and girls. You may choose one of two options: Option A - turn in a Scrapbook of clippings of print advertisements, postcards, greeting cards, flyers, etc. Option B - turn in a Videotape of recordings of music videos, TV commercials, movie trailers, or segments from TV programs (you may choose to focus on one genre here). In addition to this collection, you will need to write a 3-4 page overview and analysis (typed and double-spaced) of the items that you collected. Two bonus points will be added to this assignment when you share any of your media watch images on our webct board (by scanning images or passing on to me videotaped segments, converted into media files to be uploaded on webct). The assignment is due Wed., Apr. 21.

Media Activism Project (30 points)

To create media awareness, you will be expected to incorporate creative resistance in a group project. Media activism could include such projects as spoof ads, magazines and commercials, PSA videos, and radio station activities. (See Adbusters’ website: http://www.adbusters.org or Breakthrough TV website: http://www.breakthrough.tv) You may sign up for one of the following group activism projects (to be presented last week of class):

- Creative Video - make a spoof commercial video, documentary short, an informative 30-second PSA, or a progressive music video or experimental film.
- Resistance Advertising - create a spoof advertising poster campaign or build a parody magazine.
- Feminist Hour on the Radio - through a campus or local radio station (i.e. – WRPI), seek air time (for approximately 1 hour) for the broadcasting of an antiracist, global feminist radio show, featuring announcements, readings, audio performances, and progressive music (the preparation of a playlist of possible music selections should be completed in advance).
- Class Website – construct a web site featuring the above class projects and assignments.

Grading Policy:

Your final grade is based on accumulative points.
