Spring Family Training Series

Neuropsychology of Autism Spectrum Disorders

Presenter: Jodie Cohen, Ph.D.

Neuropsychology is the study of how the brain relates to the behavior we observe and it offers a framework for understanding and intervening for individuals with ASD. In this session, participants will gain familiarity with the leading neuro-psychological and neuroanatomical theories behind ASD. This session will review how ASD affects cognition and behavior across neuropsychological areas (e.g. attention, social skills, motor development) and highlight evidence-based and promising interventions and strategies to support individuals with ASD in each area.
