As organizations are producing immense amounts of information and data at a staggering rate, it is emerging technologies and innovative strategies that are making it possible to collect, manage, and analyze that data. The Master of Science in Information Science (MSIS) program at the College of Emergency Preparedness, Homeland Security and Cybersecurity (CEHC) at the University at Albany provides a unique opportunity for interdisciplinary, experiential training that will help you hone the necessary skills to succeed in the expansive and fast-growing field of Information Science.

Our American Library Association (ALA)-accredited MSIS prepares students for a career in data science and intelligence analytics; public, academic, archival, and other private sector libraries, information and database management systems; and a wide range of government, corporate, and nonprofit organizations.

“Whether you want to pursue a career as a data scientist, intelligence analyst, or librarian, a wide range of expertise and credentials is needed for your future; the MSIS program is how you get there.”

CUSTOMIZED TRACKS FOR YOUR EDUCATION

INTELLIGENCE ANALYSIS
Develop the fundamental data science skills needed to successfully work in the growing fields of public and private intelligence analysis including coursework in cyber threat analysis, terrorism, and homeland security intelligences.

DATA ANALYTICS
Blend the technical facets of EHC with forward-looking, interdisciplinary approaches that bridge the gap between information acquisition and actionable knowledge.

INFORMATION MANAGEMENT AND TECHNOLOGY
