Prior to joining the University Art Museum at SUNY Albany, Olga Dekalo was Assistant Curator at the Katonah Museum of Art in Westchester, New York. She recently curated PLAY & REWIND: Ode to Summer on Film (2018) and Object Out Loud: Arman and Nick Cave (2017). Previously she was Curatorial Associate at the non-profit, alternative space Participant Inc where she worked with artists across disciplines and generations including A.K. Burns, Baseera Khan, Luther Price, among others and, in conjunction with the Bronx Museum retrospective of the work of Martin Wong, presented rarely seen ephemera by the artist (2016). As the Curatorial Fellow at SculptureCenter, she conceived and organized a group exhibition, Fantasy Can Invent Nothing New (2016), culled from an open call for artists to create new work. She co-curated To Look Is To Labor with Harun Farocki, Lucy Raven, and Andrew Norman Wilson, Basilica, Hudson, NY (2013). Dekalo is a graduate of Center for Curatorial Studies at Bard College (2013).

Dekalo stated: “I’m thrilled to join an institution devoted to bridging the visual arts with the intellectual life of the university and the larger community and look forward to advancing the museum’s mission to foster dialogue across disciplines and departments.”

Welcome, Olga!
