Long Term Publication Projects:

- General Electric and the World. A history of the General Electric Corporation. This project encompasses many of my oral history, research, and archival projects of the last decade (see above and below); it will culminate in a three-volume history of the corporation (vol 1, 1880s-1922; vol. 2, 1922-1961; vol. 3, 1961-present), a comprehensive multimedia Web site and virtual museum on GE history, and a multi-part audio documentary series.

- A Community of Capital: An Oral History of the General Electric Company. A history of the General Electric Corporation as told by the managers, engineers, scientists, and blue- and pink-collar workers who built and sustain it.

Museum Exhibits/Public History Projects:

- Summer 2022 Film Series. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Planner and curator.
- Summer 2021 Film Series. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Planner and curator.
- "Gone Fishin' ~ A History of Fishing in the Adirondacks." Curator. Exhibit overview: "With more than 3,000 lakes and ponds, and 30,000 miles of rivers and streams, the Adirondacks have drawn anglers to the region for hundreds of years. From the first visitations and settlements of Native Americans, to the annual sojourn of tourists and fishing enthusiasts, to satisfying the food and recreational needs of residents, fishing has always played a vital role in the economy and culture of the Adirondacks. In this exhibit, we explore the history of fishing in the Adirondack Mountains from the pre-Colonial era to the present -- with a special emphasis on Essex County — focusing on the natural and human transformation of Adirondack lake, river, and stream fisheries as well as the science, art, and traditions of sport fishing in the region." Adirondack History Museum. (2020-2021).
- Summer 2020 Film Series. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Planner and curator.
- "Women and the Temperance Movement," Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Summer 2019. Designer, researcher, writer.
- Summer 2019 Film Series. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Planner and curator.
- "Adirondack Suffragists: Celebrating 100 Years of Votes for Women." Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Summer 2017. Co-designer, researcher, writer, and co-producer with Margaret Bartley. Updated -- phase 2 (summer, 2018) -- Suffrage, Women, and the Peace Movement.
- World War I Film Series. Summer 2018. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Planner and curator.
- "A History of Hiking in the Adirondack High Peaks." Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Phase 1 formally opened May 2018. A permanent exhibit exploring the history of hiking in the High Peaks region of the Adirondack Mountains of New York from the colonial era to the present. The project highlights the exploration, early surveying and mapping of the region, the development of the area's trail system(s), the various organizations and individuals who helped define and preserve the region's wilderness character, and the NYS agencies and individuals who help manage it. Co-producer, researcher, and writer -- with Sharp Swan and Museum Director Aurora McCaffrey.
- Suffragist Film Series. Summer 2017. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Planner and coordinator.

- Pleasant Valley Theater. Essex County Historical Society, Adirondack History Museum. Elizabethtown, New York. Designer and construction coordinator of the theater.

On-line Projects:

- Labor and Industry in Troy and Cohoes: A Brief History. Co-editor and Website creator. Updated and revised (2015) -- based on original text by James S. Corsaro and Kathleen D. Roe: <http://www.albany.edu/history/Troy-Cohoes>.
- Founder, Director, Executive Producer (1996-present). Talking History: Aural History Productions <<http://www.talkinghistory.org>>. Talking History (TH) is a production, distribution, and instructional center for all forms of "aural" history; it seeks to enlarge the tools and venues of historical research and publication by promoting production of radio documentaries and other forms of aural history. In addition to a weekly radio program and a radio WWW archive, TH sponsors numerous aural history projects.
- Editor and Co-Founder (1997-2002). The Journal for MultiMedia History <<http://www.albany.edu/jmmh>>. I served, as well, as chief multimedia producer and designer. The JMMH was a pioneering peer-reviewed electronic journal that presented, evaluated, and disseminated multimedia historical scholarship. It offered scholars opportunities to present and analyze materials impossible to incorporate into traditional text articles and monographs, and to deliver them to both professional and lay audiences around the world. Journal publication was suspended in 2002 as we looked for production partners to revive it. The JMMH will soon be reborn -- to be edited by Kwinn Doran. A new editorial board is currently being organized.
- Author. Life and Labor in a Corporate Community: An On-Line Multi-Media History of the Endicott Johnson Corporation. (July 2001; updated 2010) <<http://www.albany.edu/history/ej>> and at <<http://www.ejhistory.org>>. [In progress]
- Attica Revisited. This is an on-line multimedia archive and resource site focusing on the history of the 1971 New York State Attica prison uprising. See work-to-date at:

<http://www.talkinghistory.org/attica> \ [In progress]

- The Glovers of Fulton County, New York. This is an on-line virtual museum, archive, and resource site on the history of the Fulton County, NY glove industry. When completed it will include thousands of pages of text and documents, over 1200 photographs and images, biographies of manufacturers, streaming video and audio interviews with workers and managers, as well as extensive descriptions of work processes. See work-to-date at:
<http://www.albany.edu/history/glovers/> [In progress]
- U.S. Labor and Industrial History World Wide Web Audio Archive. [<http://www.albany.edu/history/LaborAudio/index.html>] An on-line archive of recordings documenting major events and personalities related to U.S. labor history. The collection is regularly updated. Recordings are drawn from numerous audio archives, though most come from -- or are processed at -- the University at Albany. They are organized by topic. Some sub-series are supplemented with text and transcript records. See, especially the Nathan Spero: A Life in the UE [<http://www.talkinghistory.org/spero/index.html>] collection.
- Sisters in the Brotherhoods Web site. [2012]. Project Director. With Carolyn Wavrin (coding and design work) and Jane LaTour. Oral history Web site complementing Jane LaTour's Sisters in the Brotherhoods: Working Women Organizing for Equality in New York (Palgrave Studies in Oral History, 2010). The site profile LaTour's oral histories with "women who, against considerable odds, broke the gender barrier to blue-collar employment in various trades in New York City."

- "Turkish Radical Poet Nazim Hikmet Recalls Hiroshima: The story of 'The Little Girl'/'I Come and Stand at Every Door.'"

Many events in American and world history have stimulated the composition of commemorative songs and poems. On this anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima, we look back at one event and how writers and poets reacted to it -- through a close examination of ONE poem/song: recited by Hema Manicka. "The Little Girl" was written by Turkish Communist poet Nazim Hikmet in the 1950s, and originally titled "Kiz Çocugu." It is also known in English by various titles -- in addition to "The Little Girl" -- including "Hiroshima Girl" and "I come and Stand at Every Door." Nazim Hikmet (1901-1963) was one of Turkey's best known modern poets and novelists; he was also a Communist and a political activist. In the 1940s, he was imprisoned in Turkey for his political activities, but freed in 1950s after a world-wide campaign on his behalf. Soon afterward he left Turkey and lived in exile in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe for the rest of his life. In the mid-1950s, he wrote the poem/song "The Little Girl."

In this segment of Talking History, aired on 8-6-2009, I examine the origins and evolution of Hikmet's poem and how it was re-shaped by later singers and song-writers, including Pete Seeger. Researched, hosted, and edited by Gerald Zahavi.

- "Sam Adams Darcy on the San Francisco Strike of 1934." (July 23, 2009).

Selection from talks delivered by former U.S. Communist Party activist and leader Samuel Adams Darcy (1905-2005) at Cornell University in November of 1975. The talks were delivered to students in Professors Roger Keeran's and Cletus Daniels' classes. Edited and introduced by Gerald Zahavi.

- "Claire Parham on the Construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway." (June 25, 2009). Hour-long interview. This year marks the 50th anniversary of the completion of the construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Project, one of the great infrastructural construction projects of the 20th century. In this interview I explore the history of the Project with Claire Puccia Parham, author of the recently published The St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Project: An Oral History of the Greatest Construction Show on Earth (Syracuse University Press, 2009). In our conversation, we delve into origins of this bi-national undertaking, dealing especially into lives of the workers who made it possible. Parham, a native of Watertown, NY, currently teaches history at Siena College. She earned a BA degrees from St. Lawrence University, received her master's degree from the University of Massachusetts/Amherst and completed her Ph.D. in American history at SUNY Binghamton. She's also the author of From Great Wilderness To Seaway Towns: A Comparative History of Cornwall, Ontario, and Massena, New York, 1784-2001 (SUNY Press, 2004). Conducted, recorded, and edited by Gerald Zahavi.

- "An Interview with Stetson Kennedy (From the Oral History Association 2008 Meeting, October 16, 2008)." Filmed and edited by Gerald Zahavi.

Stetson Kennedy, born in Jacksonville, Florida in 1916, is a writer, journalist, social and political activist, and a former administrator of the Florida Federal Writers Project (1935-39). Influenced by the documentary tradition that was emerging with and without federal government sponsorship during the Great Depression, and by such books as Erskine Caldwell and Margaret Bourke-White's You Have Seen Their Faces (1937), he sought to insure that on his state's level, the Florida Writers Project would contribute to that emerging tradition. After his years with the Project, he became an investigative journalist and established a strong reputation for his anti-racist writings, writings that came to include: Southern Exposure (1946), Forced Labor in the United States (1953), I Rode With the Klan (1954), Jim Crow Guide to the U.S.A. (1959) and The Klan Unmasked (1990). In his battles with the southern Ku Klux Klan, Kennedy not only exposed their violent work in print, but also through radio. He successfully encouraged the producers of The Adventures of Superman, an enormously popular radio show, to shift Superman's enemies from the WWII Nazi's and Japanese, to more domestic targets, like the Klan. This program was presented as an audio broadcast (edited for length) on Talking History. Stetson was introduced and interviewed in front of a large audience by David A. Taylor, head of Research and Programs with the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress and director of the Center's annual field school for cultural documentation.

- The Story of Sosua: A Tale of Two Racisms. (August, 2008). Sosua: Haven in the Caribbean is a 1941 film produced by the Dominican Republic Settlement Association. It tells the (incomplete) story of a Jewish war refugee community established in the late 1930s in the Dominican Republic, with the blessings of its dictator, Rafael L. Trujillo. Trujillo, hardly known for his human rights record, took advantage of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's call for an international conference to address the plight of European refugees - particularly Jewish refugees. A 32-nation conference to address the problem was convened in Évian, France in 1938. Only the Dominican Republic made a firm commitment to admit refugees, and soon afterwards took in around 500 Jews. Trujillo's motives were hardly humanitarian: he was not only trying to redeem his reputation as an ethnic cleanser (the term was not used then), but he also sought to racially transform his people. Trujillo had adopted a policy that strove to "whiten" the Dominican population and had practiced a vicious policy of racial discrimination against mostly-black Haitians -- one that came to be known as "antihaitianismo." In 1937 he ordered the massacre of thousands of Haitians residing in the Dominican Republic. The admission of white Jews -- the victims of racism in Germany and Austria -- served Trujillo's racist goal of "whitening" his own nation. Here, we present the soundtrack from this archival film as a springboard to tell the story of Trujillo's racial policies and the fate of the lucky 500 Jews who were ironically saved by it.

- Christine Ehrick on Radio Femenina.

Prof. Susan Gauss of the University at Albany, SUNY, interviews Christine Ehrick (MA, Ph.D., UCLA), Associate Professor of History at the University of Louisville, about Radio Femenina and women and radio in the Puerta del Sol. Ehrick's first book, The Shield of the Weak: Feminism and the State in Uruguay, 1903-1933, which was published in 2005 by the University of New Mexico Press, is a comparative study of feminist political organizations across the political spectrum and their relationship to the emergence of Latin America's first "welfare state." She is currently researching women and citizenship in "golden age" of Latin American radio (1930s-1950s), and is interested in intersections of gender and technology in Latin America. Dr. Ehrick teaches courses in Colonial and Modern Latin America, the History of Mexico, Latin American Women, and Media History. Recorded (5/11/2008), edited, and produced by Gerald Zahavi.

- Ann Pfau and David Hochfelder on World War II Radio Propaganda (April 2008).

Historians Ann Pfau and David Hochfelder discuss their recent research into real and imagined World War II propaganda broadcasts from Japan and Germany made by Iva Toguri, William Joyce, Mildred Gillars, and Rita Zucca. Our conversation with them explores such varied topics as wartime rumors, popular legends about World War II radio propaganda, oral history, British and American wartime propaganda monitoring, soldier surveys, and popular histories and Hollywood depictions of Tokyo Rose, Lord Haw Haw, and Axis Sally. Pfau holds a Ph.D. in United States history from Rutgers University and is author of Miss Yourlovin: GIs, Gender, and Domesticity during World War II (forthcoming as an e-book from Columbia University Press in May 2008). She will begin researching a book about World War II radio traitors later this month. David Hochfelder is assistant professor at SUNY at Albany. He is currently finishing a book on the history of the American telegraph industry. His interest in WW2 radio propaganda arose from his work in public history and oral history. Produced and hosted by Gerald Zahavi and Susan McCormick.

- The Miracle Case.

Prof. Laura Wittern-Keller, author of Freedom of the Screen: Legal Challenges to State Film Censorship (University Press of Kentucky) and visiting professor of History at the University at Albany, SUNY, tells the story of the attempt in the early 1950s to block the showing of Roberto Rossellini film 'The Miracle,' and film distributor Joseph Burstyn's battle against film censorship. Recorded at the University at Albany's History and Documentary Studies Sound Studio, April 11, 2008.

BACKGROUND: "In 1950 the Roberto Rossellini film 'The Miracle,' part of a trilogy called 'Ways of Love,' was condemned by the Catholic Legion of Decency and censored by the New York State Motion Picture Division (the state censor board). The Miracle's distributor, Joseph Burstyn, fought back through the New York courts and finally at the United States Supreme Court, claiming that his First Amendment rights had been violated by the state. Burstyn won and in 1952, a unanimous Supreme Court ruled that movies were entitled to the free speech protections of the First Amendment. The story did not end there, though, since the Court allowed state censorship statutes to stand provided they were "narrowly drawn." The fight over the right of states to pre-approve movies continued until 1965 when all states but Maryland stopped censoring movies." For more information on this story, see Laura Wittern-Keller's Freedom of the Screen and the forthcoming Burstyn v. Wilson: The Miracle Case by Ray Haberski, Jr. and Laura Wittern-Keller (Landmarks Law Cases series of the University Press of Kansas). Recorded, edited, and produced by Gerald Zahavi.

- D. Graham Burnett on Maurice, v. Judd.

On Friday, November 16, 2007, Dr. D. Graham Burnett, a historian of science from Princeton University, was the keynote speaker at the annual Researching New York conference at the University at Albany, SUNY. He delivered this talk about an 1818 New York trial, Maurice, v. Judd, that raised public debate about the order of nature, and how we understand it. The trial dramatized the transformations that were taking place in the years of the early Republic, when Americans' understanding of the natural world was being challenged -- often in courts of law. Burnett explores the root question of Maurice, v. Judd: Is a whale a fish? The question was important economically, scientifically, and culturally. If indeed the courts ruled a whale a fish, whale oil was taxable as fish oil and subject to state inspection. But there was more at stake: arguments based on the new science of taxonomy challenged accepted Biblical interpretations and drove the debate. Burnett is the author of Trying Leviathan: The Nineteenth-Century New York Court Case That Put the Whale on Trial and Challenged the Order of Nature (Princeton University Press, 2007).

- "Kevin Willmott on CSA: Confederate States of America." (2007). Interview conducted by Gerry Zahavi with Kevin Willmott on May 3, 2007. Willmott, who is an Associate Professor in the Film Studies Department of the University of Kansas, produced the film "C.S.A - THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA," as a counter-factual faux documentary -- modeled after a Ken Burns-style documentary -- about an America in which had the South won the Civil War. The film was selected for the 2004 Sundance Film festival and later sold to IFC Films (the film was also backed for distribution by Spike Lee). CSA has played in film festivals in Denver, Colorado, Stockholm, Sweden, Locarno, Switzerland and the Hamptons, New York and had its theatrical release in February of 2006.

- "Songs from General Electric's Association Island" (2007).

Association Island is situated just off the coast of the northeastern edge of Lake Ontario in New York State near the outlet of the Great Lakes and the beginning of the St. Lawrence River. From 1907 until the mid-1950s it served as a summer retreat and conference center for managers and engineers from the National Electric Lamp Company and later the General Electric Company (GE), the National's corporate parent. The Island is perhaps more widely familiar to avid modern fiction readers as the satirized "Meadows" in Kurt Vonnegut's Player Piano (1952). In Vonnegut's novel the "flat, grassy island" located on the St. Lawrence River, was a corporate playground that also served as a rite-of-passage to status and power within a technocratic dystopia. There, in Vonnegut's fictional realm-as in real life-managers and engineers, all male, "spent a week each summer in an orgy of morale building." Through "team athletics, group sings, bonfires and skyrockets, bawdy entertainment, free whiskey and cigars; and through plays, put on by professional actors, which pleasantly but unmistakably made clear the nature of good deportment within the system, and the shape of firm resolves for the challenging year ahead," the Island worked "its magic" on its temporary inhabitants, helping to forge a male-centered brotherhood of managers. Yet, ironically, Association Island in 1952, when Player Piano was published, was entering the final years of usefulness to the corporation. Soon, a new corporate structure and ethos emerged and swept away the seemingly quaint fraternalism of the serene Island. In 1959, the company turned the Island over to the YMCA.

The two songs featured in this selection come from the GE archival collection of the Hall of History at the Schenectady Museum, Schenectady, NY and were digitized for the Museum some years ago in an attempt to preserve these very rare recordings of the "Island Chorus" which reflect the culture of the Island during its heyday.

- "Mark Klempner on Dutch Rescuers of Jews During WWII." Mark Klempner, an oral historian and folklorist who recently published a book on Dutch rescuers of Jews during World War II (The Heart Has Reasons: Holocaust Rescuers and Their Stories of Courage, 2006) discusses his research and book in this lengthy interview. Klempner began as a research project during his senior year as an English major at Cornell in 1996-97. The interview includes audio excerpts from some of the individuals Klempner interviewed. Go to Talking History to listen to the interview. April 20, 2006. [Producer/editor/interviewer].
- "Agrarian Movements in Nineteenth-Century New York." Thomas Summerhill, Associate Professor of History at Michigan State University, and author of Harvest of Dissent: Agrarianism In 19th Century New York (Univ. of Illinois Press, 2005), joins Gerald Zahavi in a discussion of agrarian movements in nineteenth-century central New York. Summerhill explores Northern farmers' complex attitudes toward a spreading capitalist market and their tendencies to both embrace and resist it. Zahavi and Summerhill focus on such topics as the Anti-Rent Wars, the debate over the construction of the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad, and the rise and significance of the Grange. Go to Talking History to listen to the interview. March 30, 2006. [Producer/editor/interviewer].
- "Reginald Jones on GE's Jack Welch." Reginald Jones died on December 30, 2003 in Greenwich, Ct. He began his career at General Electric in the 1930s, and worked his way up the corporate ladder until, in 1972, he was selected as President and CEO of the firm. He headed the company from 1972 through 1981, implementing various innovative strategic planning initiatives and driving the corporation further into a global marketplace. Under his watch, the company's sales more than doubled; its profits did even better. In the late 1970s and early 1980s, several business publications acknowledged him to have been one of the most influential business leaders in America. In fact, in 1981, the year of his retirement, U.S. News & World Report ranked him as the most influential man in business. Not surprisingly, three presidents had relied on his counsel. In this short selection from a day-long interview conducted by Gerald Zahavi on June 12, 2000, Jones speaks about how he went about selecting his successor, Jack Welch. Aired Sept. 15, 2005. [Producer/editor/interviewer]

[Host/Producer/Editor]. 2004.
- "A History of Menstruation and Menstrual Technologies in America." Gerald Zahavi interviews Sharra L. Vostral, Assistant Professor of Science and Technology Studies, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Vostral is a specialist in medical history and the history of sexuality and is the author, most recently, of "Masking Menstruation: The Emergence of Menstrual Hygiene Products in the United States" in Andrew Shail, ed. Menstruation: History and Culture from Antiquity to Modernity (Palgrave, UK., forthcoming), and "Reproduction, Regulation, and Body Politics," Journal of Women's History 15-2 (Summer 2003): 197-207. Vostral is currently working on a monograph titled Red Marks: Menstruation, Menstrual Hygiene Products, and Women's Rights in the United States.
- "White Boy: A Conversation with Historian Mark Naison." Gerald Zahavi interviews Mark Naison, Professor of African and African-American Studies and Director of the Urban Studies Program at Fordham University. Naison is the author of White Boy: A Memoir (Temple University Press, 2002), Communists in Harlem During the Depression (University of Illinois Press, 1983), co-author of The Tenant Movement in New York City, 1940-1984 (Rutgers University Press, 1986), and the author of several articles on African-American culture and contemporary urban issues, including "Outlaw Culture in Black Culture" (Reconstruction, Fall 1994). In this interview Naison reviews his life and career as a specialist in African American history -- and his participation in some of the most significant social and political movements in recent American history: the Civil Rights Movement, the Anti-War Movement, SDS, and the Weathermen.

PLANNED PROJECTS:

- "Testing Roger Ray." Video and audio documentary. Between 1948 and 1958, the U.S. tested 66 nuclear devices in the Marshall Islands -- in the Bikini and Enewetak atolls. Local populations were relocated to other atolls and islands as part of the preparation for these tests. Roger Ray played a key role in supervising many aspects of the numerous atomic and hydrogen blasts that took place during these years. In the 1970s, he became an outspoken advocate for the repatriation of the Enewetakese to Enewetak and very active in efforts to clean up the atoll in preparation for their return. This documentary presents his story. [Editing in progress; segments aired on TalkingHistory.]
- "Understanding 'the Arab Mind': A century of Economic Globalization by General Electric, 1890s-1990." Research in progress. Conference paper completed and presented.

- "Purging Demons and Rabble Rousers: Tales of Cold War Albany." Post-World War II Cold War tensions are seen from a local perspective in three stories about Cold War-era Albany, New York: the story of Paul Robeson, a scholar, civil rights champion and political activist who was denied a concert permit during his 1947 visit to Albany; the tale of Jeanette Dworkin, an Albany native active in the Albany Communist party (CP) and in various local left-wing organizations; and the story of Janet Scott, a newspaper woman working for the Knickerbocker News, who was hounded out of her profession because of her involvement with the CP and regional left-wing unions. These tales reveal battles waged within newspaper offices, in schools, in local courts, in State office buildings, and on street corners-battles that divided colleagues, students, teachers, office workers, and friends. Article and radio documentary currently under production. Paper completed and presented.
