Note: "Demand reduction" refers to programs and research related to drug abuse treatment, education, rehabilitation, and prevention that are designed to reduce the demand for drugs. "Supply reduction" refers to a wide scope of law enforcement-related activities designed to reduce the supply of drugs in the United States and abroad.

The data presented above are not comparable to data shown in table 1.15.2010 because based on a directive from Congress, stating that "the Federal drug control budget should represent the full range of Federal spending, including costs associated with the consequences of drug use," the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) restructured the national drug control budget. A review of Federal programs resulted in identifying additional departments/agencies/programs that utilized Federal resources to "reduce drug use and its consequences." ONDCP revised the drug control budget figures to include the additional departments, etc. (FY 2012 Budget Summary, p. 5).
