Note: The Federal Magistrates Act (28 U.S.C. 636(b)) provides the authority under which magistrate judges assist courts in the performance of "additional duties." This authority was both broadened and clarified by Public Law 94-577, Oct. 21, 1976, and by new procedural rules governing most habeas corpus proceedings in the district courts, effective Feb. 1, 1977. The changes make clear the ability of the parties of a civil case to consent to have the case referred to a magistrate for trial as a special matter; the changes also empower magistrates to conduct evidentiary hearings in prisoner petition cases. Additionally, the role of magistrates in providing pretrial assistance to district judges in both dispositive and non-dispositive matters has been clarified. Data for 1990 are reported for the 12-month period ending June 30. Beginning in 1998, data are reported for the Federal fiscal year, which is the 12-month period ending September 30. Some data have been revised by the Source and will differ from previous editions of SOURCEBOOK.

^aData for 1990 include material witness hearings only; data for 1999-2010 include material witness hearings and attorney appointment hearings.

^bPrior to 2000, data include contested motions only; beginning in 2000, data include both contested and uncontested motions.

^cPrior to 2000, data do not include status conferences; beginning in 2000, data include status conferences.

^dData for 1990 include writs only; beyond 1990 data include writs, mental competency hearings, and motion hearings.

^eBeginning in 1998, data include fee applications, summary jury trials, and motion hearings. Beginning in 2006, data include early neutral evaluations.

^fPrior to 2000, this category included seizure/inspection warrants and orders of entry, judgment debtor exams, extradition hearings, contempt proceedings, Criminal Justice Act fee applications, naturalization proceedings, grand jury returns, civil and criminal IRS enforcement proceedings, calendar calls, and voir dire. Beginning in 2000, civil and criminal other jury matters, and international prisoner transfer proceedings were added.
