Undergraduate Research Student Researcher of the Month

Meet Andrew McMahon!

ANDREW
MCMAHON

Andrew is a senior at UAlbany, and is currently running an independent research study with Dr. Michael Young. Andrew's research is all about VOST (virtual operation support teams), a concept developed by emergency managers as a form of digital volunteerism. These volunteer teams monitor and collect data from social media websites to help support message and awareness capacity of governmental agencies in responding to and recovering from disasters or major incidents. By combining professional and academic knowledge, Andrew hopes this project will help to sketch out a pathway to establishing a VOST at the UAlbany College of Emergency Preparedness, Homeland Security, and Cyber Security.

Do you have someone you want to nominate as the next student researcher of the month?
